We all learn differently.
The goal of this site is to gather stories about unique learning styles.

Most of us can probably recall a time when we had trouble learning something new, or perhaps a time when something came easily to us. What was it about the learning experience that didn't work for us, and what was it that worked well?

We'd like to hear your story about how you like to learn best.

- Consider the following:
- Describe how you learned to do something you now do regularly
  - Consider something you've tried to learn to do, but haven't been able to
  - Think of a challenge you had while learning something new
  - Describe how you taught someone else
  - Consider something that surprised you, for example, something you didn't think would help you learn but did
  - Describe a time you learned something when you didn't expect to

The year before she died, my grandmother taught me how to play the ukelele. She was also the person who showed me how to pick mushrooms.

This is a song about mushrooms that I wrote. I am playing the ukelele and singing, and my brother is playing a drum which is actually a tin can.
