A wealth of visual memories of Montreal, Quebec and Canada dating principally from the 18th and 19th centuries, the Paintings, Prints and Drawings sector eloquently conjures up the personalities, places and events of bygone days. The collection contains some 65,000 iconographical pieces, making it one of the largest of its kind in Canada.

Profile
* Paintings (oils, acrylics and watercolours, mostly from the 19th century).
* An important collection of miniatures and silhouettes.
* Prints: maps, plans, portraits (mostly from 1751 to 1900).
* Original drawings (graphite, ink, pastel). Major collections of caricatures from the 19th and 20th centuries, including the John Collins, Serge Chapleau and Terry Mosher (Aislin) fonds.

Creator's name
1990, 20th century
M996.11.142

David Ross McCord acquired a number of original caricatures dating from the 18th century that are among the oldest executed in Canada. Following his example, the McCord Museum is an enthusiastic collector of humorous drawings created by the leading political cartoonists of Canada's illustrated press among them Aislin, who is the author of nearly 3,000 original works included in the collection. Aislin has been editorial cartoonist with The Gazette since 1972. Here, he shows Canada trying to bandage the wounds inflicted by the constitutional crisis of the late eighties.

What happens when we have A LOT of comments? Do we allow a lot of scrolling, or should we have a separate screen for lots of comments?

What do we do with really long comments? Should we limit comment length (a la Twitter?)

A really long artifact title, one that just stretches on, it seems, for a very long time, the sort, you know, where it feels like you're reading a novel, and you very well almost are, because this particular title is, believe it not, 252 characters long
